

Preparing for Goodbye

Written by Susan Hollingshead
Friday, 01 June 2007 11:32

Even though we aren't on the road, it sure is nice being able to stay in our Moho again, even if it is only for a couple of nights and it is at the Travel Supreme repair center. It is where we live, our home, and when we are uprooted and have to stay in a hotel or B & B, regardless of how comfortable we are made to feel, it just isn't the same.

Last night we went out to eat with our friends in Nappanee and then we came back and settled into our rig for the night. Oh, to sleep in our own bed....it was absolute heaven and it made us really appreciate what we live in. Sam seemed super content and she settled into her favourite place on the couch immediately, sleeping so soundly, she didn't even come into the bedroom once to check on us.

Today we hung out at the Moho; Rick did some polishing outside and I vacuumed inside, but we just really wanted to be at our rig for the day. Our friends Barb and Jim finally had their coach completed and late this afternoon joined us in the Travel Supreme lot. They have been staying at the Scottish B & B for the past two weeks and tonight is their first night back in their

Preparing for Goodbye

Written by Susan Hollingshead
Friday, 01 June 2007 11:32

Moho. Dee and Don came by for a visit, (they are staying in their old Moho at the Pal-Mor RV Park until their new RV is ready) so it almost felt like we were all in a real park hanging out together.

Tonight we went with Barb and Jim to a local restaurant for a farewell dinner as they will be leaving tomorrow morning for upper Michigan. Our time spent with them has been so much fun; we will definitely miss them but at the same time we are happy that they have finally received their coach back. Here is a picture of the four of us between our coaches, from left: Jim, Barb, me and Rick.