p>Today was supposed to be the day that I learned how to use the new website; loading pictures and journal entries so we can make it go “live”. Instead I worked this morning in the office and then got sidetracked with other folk’s computer problems. By the time I was done, it was too late to have my teleconference with Steve, my computer dude, so going live with the new site is postponed once again! Soon folks, soon!

Again, I am taking a break from writing and instead I’m posting a picture of our two grandchildren Makai and his baby sister Monet. This particular photo is of Monet (on the left) and Makai when he was slightly older than she is now, both doing what babies do best...sticking things in their mouths!
